

Hannah's Story

Hannah, a 43-year-old businesswoman and farmer from Kerugoya, is a single mother of two who runs a small shop selling utensils, clothing, and shoes while also growing crops like potatoes, bananas, and maize. She sought a loan to expand both her business and farming activities after learning about its low interest rates through local marketing. With the support, Hannah increased her shop's inventory and farm production, boosting her income and stability. The loan has not only allowed her to educate her children but also support her extended family and create jobs within her community by hiring workers for planting and sales. Looking ahead, Hannah hopes to secure additional funding to expand her business space and continue growing her impact.
